WHY POLISH-AMERICANS WILL REGAIN INFLUENCE OVER AMERICAN POLITICS

This is the topic of our speaker at the August meeting, Lukas Fuksa, an attorney engaged in the practice of corporate law, construction law, business and real estate transactions, and commercial litigation.

Mr. Fuksa was born in Poland and came to the United States when his family moved to Chicago in 1982. Lucas graduated with a bachelor's degree in Finance from the University of Illinois at Champaign/Urbana and a Juris Doctor degree from the University of Illinois College of Law. After practicing law with two different firms from 2002 to 2006, Lucas co-founded the law firm of Fuksa Khorshid, LLC in late 2006, where he currently focuses his efforts on catering to the needs of small to medium-sized businesses.

Lucas is currently in his fourth year as the President of the Polish American Chamber of Commerce. Through the PACC, Lucas has led many initiatives focused on promoting the interests of the Polish-American business community in the United States and increasing trade and investment among Poland and the United States.

In the fall of 2012, Lucas co-organized a political action committee aimed at uniting the Polish-American community in an effort to gain a larger influence in the American political process. The organization came to be known as the "Polish American Leader-ship Political Action Committee" or "PAL-PAC." Through PAL-PAC, Lucas hopes to engage the Polish-American community in local, state, and federal elections, underscore issues that are important to Polish-Americans, and identify political candidates that will address the concerns of Polish-Americans.

Make sure to reserve your spot for this very informative talk at our dinner meeting on Wednesday, August 21, 2013 at Przybylo's. We will enjoy an Italian Fest at this meeting. You can email your reservation (preferable) to meeting@chicagosocietypna.org, or call 847-823-8747. Abondanza!

One last thing I would like to say hope everyone is having a great memorable summer.

Fraternally Yours, Mark Orwat

I'm sure the "senior" members of the Society fondly recall the Trójkąt Polonijny, the "Polish Triangle," formed by Milwaukee, Ashland, and Division streets. This was the hub of Polonia, the center of its social and political life. Here were the headquarters of the major organizations: the Polish National Alliance, the Polish Women's Alliance, the Polish Roman Catholic Union of America with the Polish Museum. The dailies Dziennik Związkowy and Dziennik Chicagowski were published here. How many plays, Ref-Ren's revues, operas, and other theatrical productions do we remember performed at Trójcowo (Holy Trinity High School? My late father was a member of Nasza Reduta, one of numerous amateur Polish theater groups. My late grandmother sewed costumes for the Pucinska-Wolski Theater of Operas and Operettas. I fondly recall the Warszawianka restaurant on Ashland, going to numerous weddings and other functions at Oaza, Polish school at Holy Trinity, followed by harcerstwo and Lechici at Pulaski Park. Ahh, memories of days gone by.

The Trójkąt is still home to the PRCUA and the Polish Museum. Holy Trinity Church is a thriving mission. Recent additions are the Chopin Theatre and the Society for the Arts, which presents the annual Polish Film Festival.

The "Polish Triangle Coalition" was formed in 2011 to improve the environment of the Triangle and surrounding area. Neighborhood community groups, merchants and local schools are working to create a more pleasant and lively area at the Polish Triangle. This summer, the Coalition is sponsoring "Tuesdays (a) Triangle," a series of music, dance and other performances every Tuesday evening through Sept. 24th, from 6:00 to 8:00 p.m. Food is also available from truck vendors. Stop by after work and bring a folding chair and enjoy the evening.

According to its website, the Coalition is planning the following improvements to the Triangle: information and historical kiosks; a Mosaic ring around the fountain to replace the mud ring; blooming fountain to replace the water; a permanent food vendor; bicycle rental; decorative cover protecting the CTA stairwell. For more information, visit www.polishtrianglecoalition.org.

In conjunction with this revitalization of the Triangle, there is a movement to change the name of the Division Blue Line subway stop to "Division-Polonia Triangle," similar to "35th St.-Bronzeville" and "Cermak-Chinatown." You can sign a petition urging this change at www.change.org/petitions/chicago-transit-authority-modify-the-cta-blueline-s-division-station-to-division-polonia-triangle. I encourage every member to do his part to help revitalize and invigorate this vital piece of the history of Chicago's Polonia.

CONDOLENCES

Edward J. Spula, brother of Brother Frank Spula, President of the Polish National Alliance and the Polish American Congress, passed away August 1, 2013. Our condolences to Brother Frank, Edward's wife Christine and their daughters, and all the family.

WHAT IS THE P.N.A.? WHAT CAN IT DO FOR ME?

The speaker at our July meeting was Brother Charles Komosa, National Secretary of the Polish National Alliance (PNA), who spoke of the history and current activities of the PNA. The PNA was organized in Philadelphia in 1880 by Polish born Americas, as a mutual life insurance company. Its goal was to promote activities of general interest. It grew by leaps and bounds, primarily because of the situation in Poland at that time (Poland was not an independent nation then). Lodges across the US built halls, which became the nuclei of Polish life in their communities, hosting meetings, dances, classes, and other social events. Many of these lodge halls are still open and functioning.

The PNA began publishing its internal organ, the Zgoda, in 1881, and the Dziennik Związkowy in 1907, both of which are still being published. It founded Alliance College in Pennsylvania in 1912 (now closed). It owns radio station WPNA as well as PNA Bank.

In 1939, Karol Rozmarek, the grandfather of Brother Charles, became the PNA's President. This was a dramatic time, not only for Poland, but for Europe and all of the world, as World War II erupted. The 1940s saw a building of networks of Poles throughout the country. Karol Rozmarek founded the Polish American Congress in 1944 to unite Polonia's energies in the fight for a free and independent Poland. The PAC continues to this day as a permanent fixture in Polonia's political agenda.

Currently, the PNA has over 150,000 members, with assets of $440 million. It has $800 million of insurance in force, making it the 8th largest fraternal organization in the country. The PNA offers a variety of competitive products, including tax-free life insurance proceeds for final expenses, mortgage cancellation, emergency funds, college funds, child care and a monthly income. The PNA's Youth, Sports, and Seniors programs offer many programs and activities to its members. Brother Charles encourages Society members to join the PNA, either with life insurance or by purchasing an annuity, stressing that the goal of the PNA is to give back to tis members with a wide range of benefits. Brother Charles also distributed copies of the book Yesterday, Today, Tomorrow: The Story of the Polish National Alliance by Donald E. Piekosz. We thank Brother Charles for the informative talk and for the enlightening book. Bóg zapłać!

ANNUAL BENEFIT DINNER FOR ABRAMOWICZ SEMINARY

ing here, first at the Bishop Abramowicz Seminary in Chicago, then at Mundelein Seminary.

FOLKLORE OF POLAND

Let us continue our tour of Poland with the region of Podhale. While actually a part of malopolska, Podhale is so unique that it is often considered a separate region. Podhale (literally "under the Mountain meadows") is Poland's southernmost region, sometimes referred to as the "Polish highlands". It is located in the foothills of the Tatra range of the Carpathian Mountains, and is characterized by a rich tradition of folklore. One of the biggest attractions of Zakopane and the Podhale region is the authentic and colorful highland folklore. It was developed as a result of the synthesis of the folk culture of Poles and Slovaks, and the Balkans and is linked to the culture of all Carpathian lands. Also, the mountaineers of Podhale (called górale) have been exposed to a different set of cultural influences; by far the most important influence to reach Podhale from outside of Poland was during the 15th and 16th centuries when a nomadic people, the Wallachian shepherds, wandered through the Carpathian Mountains. Their culture and folklore were very strong and left a profound imprint on the cultures throughout the Carpathian Mountains. The folklore of Podhale has more similarities to other areas in the Carpathian Mountains outside of Poland than it does to Poland proper. The dance, music and folklore of the Podhale region is drastically different from the rest of Poland. Podhale is extremely mountainous, the people there have a very different life style from the other regions of Poland, where the land is mostly flat. The main occupation in Podhale is animal husbandry while in the countryside of the rest of Poland it is agriculture

Podhale is unique in that the folklore there is still alive. Many górale continue to hand-build wood houses in the old style. They continue their form of high altitude shepherding, which the Wallachian nomads brought to this region. The men still work the fields and walk the streets in their traditional costume, and at a wedding or christening celebration, or a party, musicians will play góralski music. The kapela of the region consists solely of strings: 1st violin, 2nd violin, and a bass of various sizes. The music is considered to be a perpetual part of the folk tradition, handed down from generation to generation, without notes or written music, but in its original form, played "by ear." The same tunes and songs are played in neighboring villages, but sung a little differently. Beautiful highland music today accompanies górale at home, in the tavern, and at various celebrations, making life a joy.

Górale are a hard-working people who love to sing, dance and celebrate. In a traditional dance, góral men impress their women with their fancy dancing and complicated footwork. One man intones a tune to the kapela, then dances to that tune to impress the women. Since Podhale is so mountainous, this dancing is done in one place, on a flat part of ground or even on a tree stump. The men take turns showing their prowess to the women, with a variety of intricate footwork including acrobatic jumps, leaps, and squats. Highland dancing is individual, each man dancing in his own way, according to his character, temperament, and spirit. The melody is in the soul like blood in the veins, it harmonizes as the body moves to the rhythm of the dance, giving elasticity to the feet (A little vodka helps).

Songs are usually only one verse, called the "chant," that is performed before the start of the dance by one of the boys. One important element of the song is the góralskie dialect, a characteristic element of the Highlands. Often, translating the texts from the dialect to Polish loses their beauty and originality. Characteristic of górale in signing is the women's biały głos (white voice). This type of singing primarily uses the chest register and is similar to controlled screaming. The vocal range is restrictive and in a lower texture.

The costume from Podhale is a living attire. This clothing is worn on a daily basis. Men wear white wool felt, heavily embroidered tight pants with a parzenice design and hand-made hard soled moccasins (kierpce), with lacing up the lower leg. A mountaineer hat with a red band and shells is worn on the head. The width of the brim varies according to the taste and age of the wearer. An unmarried "available" mountaineer wears a feather in his cap. A white linen or cotton shirt is worn, usually with a metal pin attached to the chest. This metal pin originally served as a means of "buttoning" the front of the man's shirt. Its design is similar to the parzenica on the men's trousers. For more festive occasions a cucha or white felt heavily embroidered cape with sleeves is worn over one shoulder and tied with a wide red ribbon. A wide ornamented leather belt is worn around the man's waist. The width of this leather belt depends on the ranking of the mountaineer in his "tribe." A ciupaga, which originally was used as a hatchet for chopping and fighting, is now blunt and serves as a walking stick and for dancing. On the back of the ciupaga are small rings. These not only make a pleasant jingle in movement, but also are used to attach insignias of places visited.

The women's dress consists of a flowered skirt of lightweight wool, a white cotton blouse, with eyelet embroidery all over the collar, the sleeves and the cuffs, and a velvet vest heavily ornamented with beads and sequins. The patterns often represent the mountain flowers and plants. While similar to the skirts worn in the Kraków region and surrounding areas, the difference is that on the skirt of the Podhale women the flowers are graduated, from being smaller and more scattered on top to being larger and closer together at the bottom. Just like the men, the woman also wear kierpce on their feet.

The górale also have their distinct dialect, still alive today. We can hear it in conversations among highlanders in Zakopane and surrounding Podhale villages .The poet Kazimierz Przerwa-Tetmajer used the Podhale dialect extensively in his poems.

The folklore of Podhale is a living tradition. Góralskie chaty

Members always have a good time. If you are available and interested, please e-mail Brother John at jawo428@aol.com, or let him know at the August general meeting.

FOLKLORE (continued from p.5)

(wooden houses) can be seen in much new construction throughout the country. Wood carvings from Podhale are known throughout the world, usually of comical or religious figures, as are wooden plates and jewelry boxes. Anyone visiting Zakopne has certainly sampled oscypek, a unique cheese made from sheep's milk (an acquired taste). Equally popular are paintings on glass. The main theme of the art are religious elements. At the end of the nineteenth century, the work of painting on glass had significantly disappeared. The renewed interest in this art took place after World War II. Currently in Podhale there are a lot of artists who are willing to develop this old but beautiful art. Zakopane and the surrounding Podhale region are a must see for any visitor to Poland.
